Is it possible to modify a prenuptial agreement after marriage?

In Connecticut, prenuptial agreements are binding contracts finalized before marriage to protect assets like future inheritances and business interests in case of divorce. However, life changes after marriage, such as unexpected inheritance or new business ventures, might necessitate updating these agreements. While you cannot modify a prenuptial agreement post-marriage, you can create a postnuptial agreement, which serves a similar purpose but is established during the marriage. Dive into our latest blog, "Is it possible to modify

a prenuptial agreement after marriage?" to find out how a postnuptial agreement can help to safeguard your future.>>
